

Robert Fulton
Business Manager
Riggers Local 136

Robert Fulton started his career as an apprentice in 1976 and worked his way up to journeyman then to foreman. By 1989, he became general foreman for Rosemont Exposition Services.

After 16 years with Rosemont Exposition Services, Robert left to take over as chief steward of Riggers Local 136 at McCormick Place. Here he made sure safety procedures were followed and assisted in labor relationships and negotiations with trade show contractor and McCormick Place officials.

Robert has served four (4) three-year terms on the Local's executive committee; one (1) three-year term as recording secretary and is currently serving his second three-year term as business manager, financial secretary/treasurer.

During Robert's time as business manager he has met with politicians regarding many labor issues arising at McCormick Place ultimately resulting in new work rules today.
